PEW & Council of State Government

In 2009, the Indiana General Assembly created the Criminal Code Evaluation Commission to evaluate the criminal laws of Indiana. If, based on the commission's evaluation, the commission determines that changes are necessary or appropriate, the commission shall make recommendations to the general assembly for the modification of the criminal laws.

In Summer of 2010, to further assist the legislative process which was implemented in to law, Governor Daniels along with support from the other two branches of state government announced a partnership with the Pew Center on the States and the Council of State Governments (CSG) Justice Center.

PEW & Council of State Government

• The aim of the partnership is to at improve public safety by reducing recidivism and managing the growth of Indiana's prison population. This will be the first comprehensive review of Indiana's criminal code and sentencing policies since 1976. The partnership will utilize the resources from both the Pew Center and the CSG to arrive at some potential legislative remedies that the Criminal Code Evaluation Commission can later support during the next two legislative sessions
